HIMAL KALASUTRA 2018

The Khalia Trail Challenge

20 km, 8200 feet 19th May

Sarmoli, Munsiri, Uttarakhand

The Khalia trail-run is a short and intense race placed in one of the most spectacular landscape settings in the Himalaya, overlooked by a range of snow covered mountains called the Panchachuli. Around 20 kilometers long, it traverses a transition from the edge of the Lesser Himalaya, to the first breathtaking sweep of the Greater Himalaya.

Starting at the river-bed of the Gori at 1,250 meters to the summit of Khalia Danda at 3,747 meters, the trail traverses fields of a few villages along a distinct trail at first, and then along a sketchy trail through Cold-temperate and Sub-alpine forests, and finally up an alpine meadow to the summit. The race will be largely self-contained, with a support and re-stocking point mid-way at Sarmoli village. The trail will be marked to keep runners oriented.

Participants should be physically fit, have had trained previously for the run, and be solely responsible for their wellbeing and safety. Reaching end of the race at the summit of Khalia is not the end of the effort, as each runner will need to walk back to Sarmoli village or a road-head (approx 10 km), as there is no road to Khalia or anywhere near. It is a run in the spirit of the self-contained, and that is an essential part of the challenge. There is no prize money for winners, the run is the reward.
